Gay ban violates discrimination law

TRENTON, N.J. — The Boy Scouts of America's ban on admitting gays violates New Jersey's laws against discrimination, a state appeals court ruled Monday.

The court said the Scouts' decision to kick James Dale out of the Boy Scouts because he is gay should be overturned. An attorney for Dale said this is the first time any appeals court has ruled against the Boy Scouts in challenges to their exclusion of homosexuals. A spokesman for the Boy Scouts' national headquarters said the decision will be appealed to the state Supreme Court.

Dale was expelled in 1990 after the group learned from a newspaper article that he was gay. He sued and a lower court judge ruled in the Scouts' favor in 1995, calling homosexuality "a serious moral wrong" and agreeing with the Boy Scouts of America that the group is a private organization and has a constitutional right to decide who can belong.

The Appellate Division of State Superior Court overruled that decision Monday, saying the Boy Scouts of America and its local councils are "places of accommodation" that "emphasize open membership" and therefore must adhere to New Jersey's anti-discrimination law.

Mudslides block trains, passengers

LOS ANGELES—A southern California passenger train service was disrupted Monday following more landslides caused by the West Coast's series of soaking El Nino-powered storms.

A landslide Sunday evening in San Clemente blocked railroad tracks and forced the evacuation of four homes, said Lt. Rich Paddock with the Orange County Sheriff's Department. No injuries were reported, but one home lost part of its back yard and patio.

Because of the blocked tracks, Amtrak service on the Los Angeles-San Diego line was halted, and a southbound train with 221 passengers had to return to San Juan Capistrano, officials said.

In Ventura County, northwest of the city, a landslide Sunday morning near Saticoy snapped a high-pressure natural gas line, the third gas-main break caused by a landslide in three weeks.

The federal government has declared 35 California counties disaster areas eligible for assistance, and nearly 17,000 Californians have registered with the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Clear weather is expected to continue through this week, but more storms are expected later in the month.

Clinton calls tax plan 'irresponsible'

WASHINGTON — Monday President Clinton said a plan with wide Republican support in Congress to abolish the nation's tax code is "an irresponsible scheme" that would be "simply reckless for the economy."

The plan would scrap the tax code by 2001 and replace it with a dramatically simpler system, such as a flat tax or national sales tax.

"I will not permit it if I can stop it, but it shouldn't pass in the first place," Clinton said.

The Republican-backed plan capitalizes on widespread anger with the current tax system and the Internal Revenue Service. Clinton said he sympathized with Americans' outrage over the system while criticizing the proposal to replace it.

He said that under the guise of reform, some in Congress were pushing "an irresponsible scheme to eliminate our tax system" without a replacement.

Yeltsin fires, hires cabinet members

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin, completing a shakeup meant to mete out punishment for Russia's woes, dismissed his minister of atomic energy Monday and named three veteran administrators to replace Cabinet officials he fired over the weekend.

Yeltsin also moved ahead in his campaign to reduce government spending, ordering the dismissal of bodyguards for a dozen top government officials, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported, citing presidential spokesman Sergei Yastzhembsky.

Yeltsin frequently shuffles his Cabinet and is known for placing blame on others for failures that might otherwise be considered his own.

"Somebody has to answer for the current state of affairs," he said last week.

GRAFFITI from page 1

With the creation of TAG, all Utah County cities were approached to partnership and to help provide the supplies and equipment to clean up graffiti. If the city would form a partnership with the group, TAG agreed to clean up any graffiti in that city, whether it was public, private or commercial property.

In the first year of operation, all Utah County cities, except Orem, participated. Orem joined during the second year of operation, Santiago said. Orem is hit the most by graffiti vandals.

Eddie Lopez, deputy probation officer for the 4th District Juvenile Court, takes his crew out on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Among seven crews, all the days of the week, except Sunday, are covered.

"We provide them with the experience that develops their skills and teaches them a work ethic," Santiago said.

No matter what the job is the kids learn to do their best. Most kids work with the group for only one or two shifts, although 10 percent of the offenders repeat the program, she said.

Graffiti occurs year round, so despite weather conditions, TAG crews are out working. Some of the supplies include donated paint, Talon and Multi-master. Talon and Multi-master are solvents that melt the paint on a surface and allow crews to wipe off graffiti.

Members of the TAG crew learn about the cost and damage of graffiti while out on the projects.

"I think it is pretty stupid the people that do it, going around painting up something. It is hard to get off and it's a waste of time," said Weston Smith, a TAG crew member.

As law enforcement in larger cities like New York, Chicago and California cities crack down on crime, families are moving to smaller and more relaxed communities. Unfortunately, their children bring their traits with them and school the other children in some of their activities, Lewis said.

But not all graffiti is considered vandalism.

Graffiti is an art, and some businesses contract graffiti artists to paint murals on their property. However, most of the graffiti seen is considered vandalism because permission was not granted by the property owner, Lewis said.

In addition to tagging, Utah County will likely become more familiar with the other two types of graffiti — gang graffiti and graffiti art.

Gang graffiti marks territory and is known as a threat among gangs. It is often referred to as "the newspaper of the streets," Lewis said.

Graffiti art consists of elaborate murals that can take many hours and numerous cans of spray paint.

men 'no' seminar

ALIESE FILLMORE
Universe Staff Writer

U students learned how to say "no" without feeling guilty as part of a week workshop series, "Saying with Confidence: Understanding," sponsored by the Center for Student Development. The seminars were taught by Family Therapy graduate students Sheila Mitchell and Kelly Smith.

Sometimes people say "yes" when they mean "no." They feel they deny others' feelings when they feel guilty that they are not fulfilling an obligation they have.

When people say "yes" is sometimes a way to identify someone as a friend, even if they agree to help someone beyond what they are able, speakers said.

To save yourself and others from a bad situation, you tell them no," especially in situations of personal safety. The speakers gave three tips for saying no to someone with a "no."

First, a person know their request. Second, know how you feel about the request.

Third, know what you want to say when denying a request, it is to show respect but be firm.

Don't feel like it is necessary to give excuses. When you agree to something you are doing, you are admitting to the person's opinions and desires don't feel like you're saying "yes" Walker said.

When you need assistance with your skills to help others, you need to ask for it. Alison Gagon, 18, a senior from Sandy, majoring in psychology, said.

"It's been a good experience of what good communication is."

Devotional to highlight hymns

By JENNI LESTER
Universe Staff Writer

BYU's School of Music will focus on the importance of hymns as a vehicle of worship in today's Devotional.

Douglas Bush, professor of music, said the purpose behind this Devotional is to try to bring hymns and sacred music in general into a more conscious awareness.

"I think it's a benefit of the church in general to understand how hymns are a part of our worship," he said.

Bush said the program includes performances by the Wind Symphony, Concert Choir, the University Singers, Dixieland Legacy Band, a cello ensemble, several vocal solos and a French horn solo by Larry Lowe, associate professor of music.

The congregation will be singing three of the hymns in the program and a narration will tie the whole program together.

"A large number of hymns used in the program are either written or arranged by faculty," Bush said.

He said hymns encourage, edify and teach as well as express devotion to God. They occupy a special place in the worship service.

Clayne Robinson, professor of music, said the most important part of a hymn is the text.

Too often we are so familiar with the hymn that we don't think about the words, he said.

He said the music of the hymn must serve the text, which in turn must encourage people to righteousness.

Robinson is singing a solo in the program called "Softly Beams the Sacred Dawning of the Great Millennial Morn," and will be accompanied by Reid Nibley. He said the text will be familiar because the same words are found in a hymn in the LDS hymnbook. However, this version has a different melody.

"I'm really in the business of encouraging people to write new hymns," Robinson said.

"We need to develop new hymns that will eventually carry with them their own spiritual and emotional recall," he said.

Robinson said this could be done by writing a new hymn or creating a new melody for an old one.

Y O P I N I O N

Let the Games begin

With the five-ringed flag now flying over Utah soil, the eyes of the Olympic world are looking toward Salt Lake City to see how Utah is going to prepare for 2002.

Since Salt Lake City was awarded the 2002 Games in 1995, many skeptics in Utah, from private citizens to government officials, have wondered if the debt usually incurred by host cities would be worth the opportunity to host the Olympics. Nagano's Games were widely lauded for their organization and presentation, raising the ante for Salt Lake even higher.

The economic benefits of hosting the Games are mostly short-term. Hosting the Olympics means tourists and visitors from all over the world coming to Utah to spend their money. Long-term economic effects are virtually nonexistent. The last two North American cities to host the Winter Games — Lake Placid, N.Y., and Calgary, Canada — never became economic meccas.

One of the most important long-term benefits from hosting the Games, however, is the impetus for change and improvement the Olympics has brought and will bring to Salt Lake. It is not unrealistic to say that the many improvements the city's government has implemented would not have been started had it not been for the Olympics. The I-15 construction is being rushed in order to be ready for 2002. The downtown Salt Lake City traffic system is also being improved for the influx of people the Olympics will bring. Construction projects on the University of Utah campus, such as the Olympic Village and renovations to Rice Stadium, will be of worth for many years to come.

The most important benefit that can come from the 2002 Olympics in Salt Lake is the important missionary opportunity for the LDS Church. The Olympics will do for Salt Lake City and Utah what Dennis Rodman and the NBA Finals could not do: give Utah and the church an international spotlight.

Near the close of the Nagano Games, the Wall Street Journal printed an article that said, in part, "Salt Lake seems eager to underplay what it is best known as: the headquarters of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints ... a religion known as devout and teetotaling."

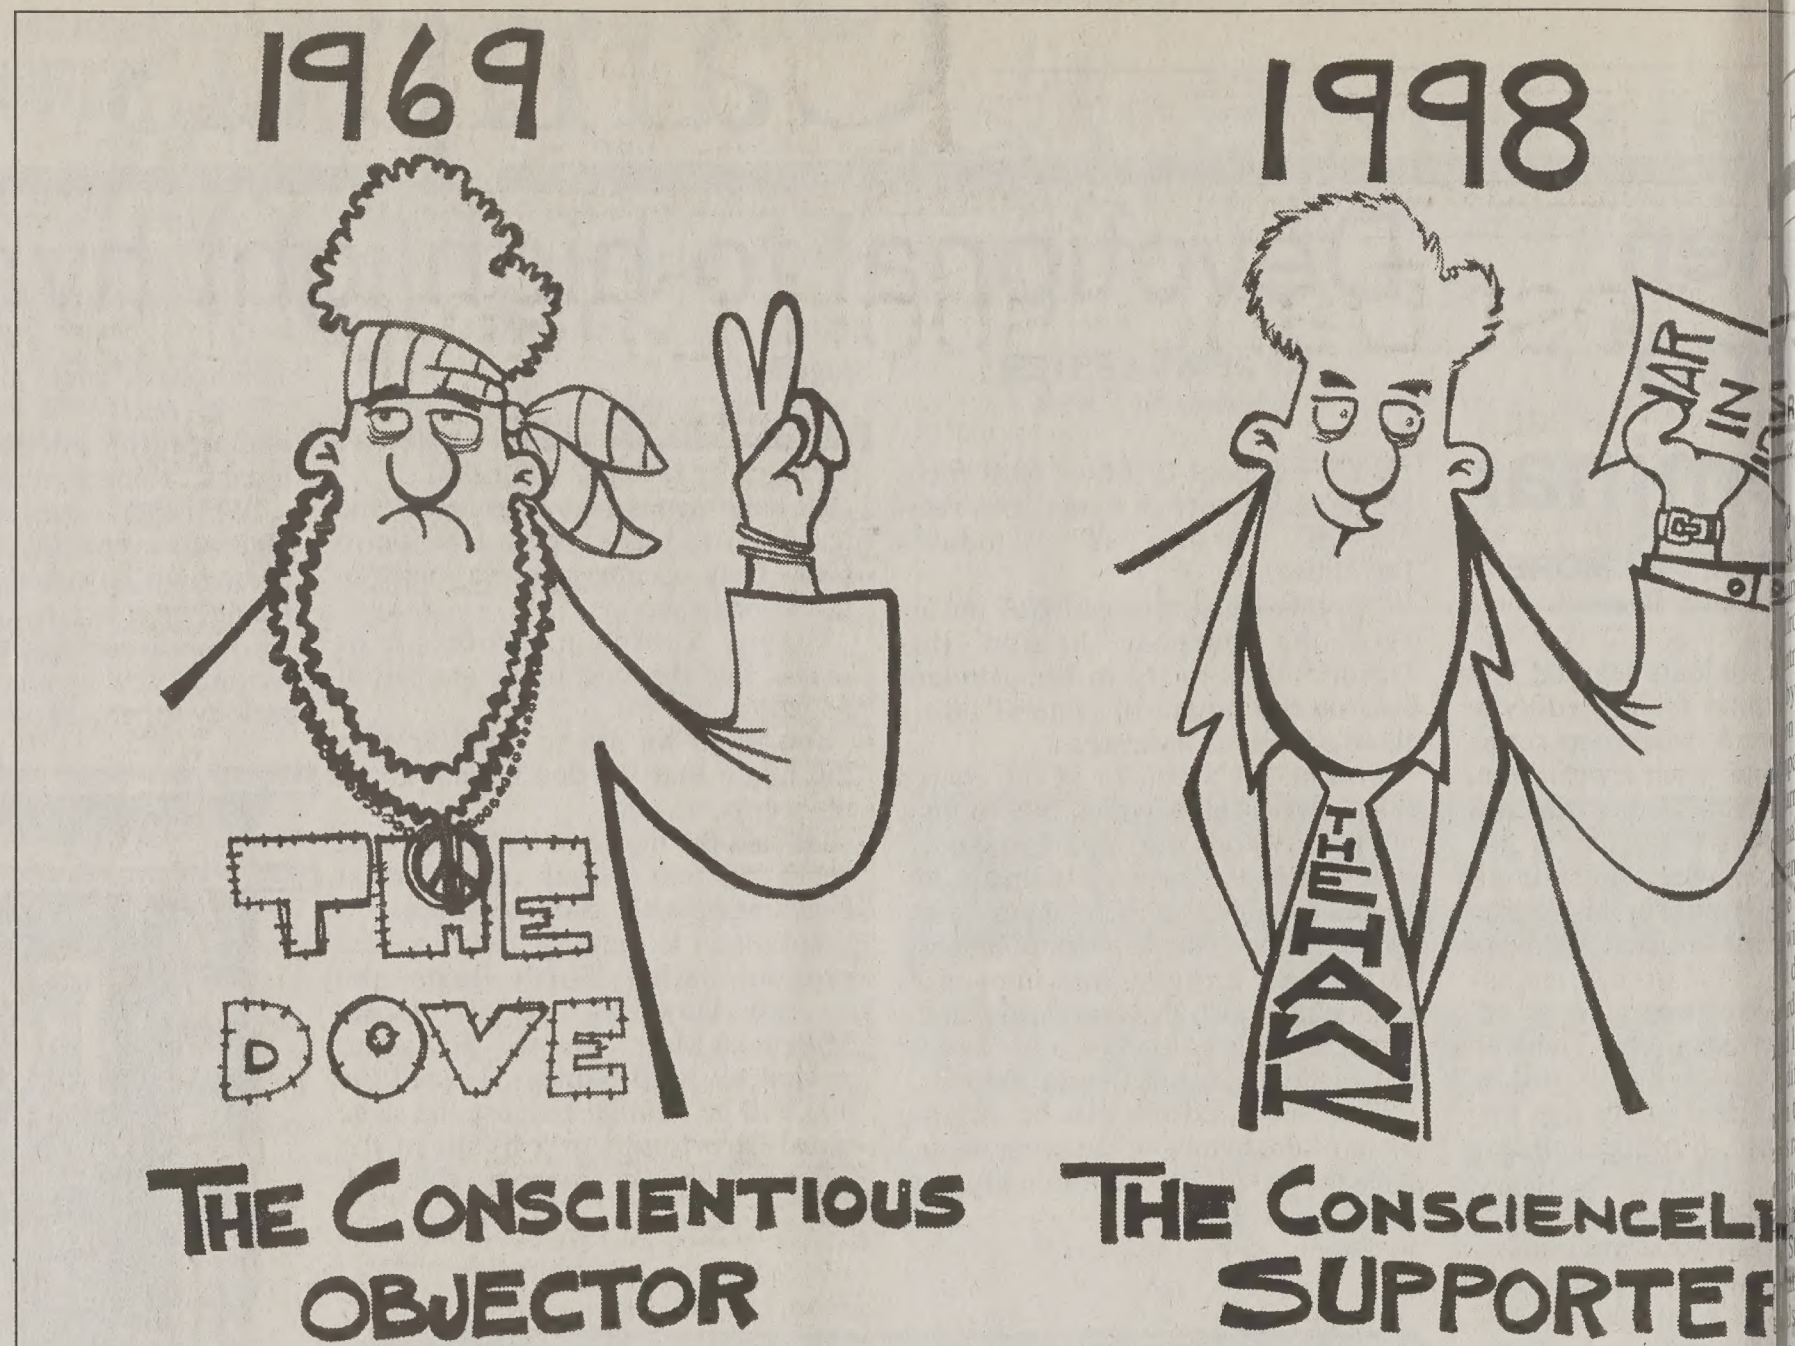

The LDS Church is a large part of the city and state culture. To underplay that fact is to disguise the state as something it is not. The city leaders should be proud a culture as unique and defined as the LDS culture has the opportunity to be showcased on an international scale. Members of the LDS Church should be proud to support the Games.

The recent problems with beer sponsors for the Games have given the rest of the world the message that even though the Games are coming, our standards will not be lowered.

The Salt Lake Olympic Committee, by default, must plan and pull off Games better than those of Nagano. As the Wall Street Journal article also said, "The better Nagano does its job, the harder it will be to impress people — Olympic officials, athletes, journalists and spectators — who visit Salt Lake City."

Despite the changes and improvements the Games will bring to the area, in order for the Olympics to be truly worthwhile, the church must support the Games to make them the most successful ever, thereby improving the church's opportunity for positive exposure.

Gone by summer

Rush Sumpter
Director, Honor Code Office

In the Feb. 26 issue of The Daily Universe, a letter titled "New answer, old problem" commented on the new gallows being constructed outside the Honor Code Office. The writer's wit and imagination enabled him to determine the purpose of those gallows long before that information was formally released to the public.

Since the secret is out, I want to suggest the day may come when the conduct of our students — their dress and grooming choices, their adherence to residential-living standards and their academic honesty — may quickly render said gallows useless. We daily see encouraging signs that our great students will not commit or tolerate violations of the Honor Code.

The signs are so encouraging that I think by summer those gallows will have been used so seldomly, if at all, that they will be overgrown by vines and surrounded by other plants.

I imagine that you might find a bench or two in the shade of the vines, and those stark symbols of Honor Code Office severity will have been turned into a pleasant and remarkable place by the effort of those who try to provide a green and attractive physical environment in which to enlarge our intellects and develop our sociality. What was one of the least attractive junctions in our campus walkways will have become a pleasant place to wait for friends or to read and discuss the works of romantic poets.

I take this opportunity to thank those who work to make our campus a green and pleasant place. I thank the student body, the grounds keepers, the designers and those who fund the institution, for their efforts to beautify our lives both physically and spiritually. They do those things that are "of good report and praiseworthy."

'Correction'

Suzanne Stradling
Vienna, Va.

We, the Eyring Science Center custodial staff, were pleased to note the student interest in our new gallows apparatus. We were, however, concerned that its purpose has been misunderstood. Permit us to clarify: The gallows will not be used by the Honor Code Office. (A guillotine for their use is scheduled for construction in the quad as part of the library construction. Contact Student Life for details.)

The gallows is a pilot project sponsored by us in conjunction with the BYU accounting office. Its purpose is to reduce the custodial workload by providing a convenient and cost-effective means of executing those students who leave their apple cores, used Kleenex, newspapers and other trash in the halls and classrooms of the ESC.

We have tentatively decided that the gallows will also serve those who walk across wet floors, yell at the floor crew for obstructing them and otherwise impede the custodial staff in their duties. This has been a much-debated issue; a substantial minority of the committee believes that these people should just be taken out and unceremoniously shot.

The committee hopes to fulfill a three-fold objective: 1) to enable the custodial crew to better maintain the building, thus saving money and improving the quality of life of all the members of the BYU community, 2) to reduce the student body in order to allow more worthy young people to have the BYU experience, and 3) to promote an entertaining and educational activity every other Saturday afternoon by selling tickets to the public hangings. If this project is successful, more gallows may be constructed for other buildings with large auditoriums.

The first hanging is scheduled for March 14. Tickets are $2. We hope you will join us in some capacity.

Remember homelands

Eun-Ju Han
Incheon, South Korea

I am writing in response to the Readers' Forum article titled "Respect the flag," a letter telling international students to show their respect to their host country.

As I am a proud citizen of South Korea, I have not given much attention to the American anthem or flag, simply because I am not a citizen of the United States. Since the International Monetary Fund's suspicious bailout of South Korea, I am having a hard time respecting my host country, but I agree that international students should show respect to their host country. Since I don't have many chances to show my respect to my own country's flag or anthem, I can show respect to my host country by stopping for the playing of the anthem, and using the time to think about my mother land. I thank the writer for showing his patriotism to his mother land.

Ground forces necessary

Ethan Skarstedt
1/19th Special Forces Group Airborne

I am writing in response to the Feb. 24 Viewpoint, not in rebuttal, but in expansion. The author makes the point that we would not be able to regain pilots shot down in a war with Iraq unless we had sufficient ground power to threaten Saddam's sovereignty. However, the author fails to explain why we cannot threaten Saddam's sovereignty with air power alone.

There are two ways to oust Saddam Hussein (excluding a general election in Iraq that he loses): 1) kill him, or 2) imprison him. It is obviously impossible to imprison him from the air, and there is only one way to be sure of killing him from the air: bomb every city and compound in Iraq with enough firepower to be sure of penetrating any and every underground bunker in existence. Even then he might have escaped to another country or be living in a tent somewhere.

Not only would the international community not go along with this, but neither would the military or civilian population of the United States (thank heavens). The only force the United States could bring to bear that would threaten Saddam's sovereignty while minimizing the loss of innocent life is a ground invasion. A man with a gun can discriminate between targets with much more accuracy than could a genius bomb, much less a smart bomb. The objection to this, obviously, is that it would cost the lives of U.S. military personnel, while saving the lives of innocent Iraqis.

The members of the U.S. military volunteered to be there. If our government says we should invade Iraq, then members of the government should be willing to give their lives in the pursuit of that goal. How heartless? How callous and bloodthirsty? So be it, that is war.

A life of service

Christopher Crippen
Wildomar, Calif.

I am writing in memory of a man whose example of service to others stretches far and wide: Professor Jim Baird, formerly of the BYU School of Education, who was killed in a tragic automobile accident Feb. 7.

I met Professor Baird 1 1/2 months ago. I was privileged to have been placed in the Jordan District Cohort, of which Professor Baird was a coordinator. As many people had, I took an immediate liking to him because of his infectious enthusiasm for education and hard work.

At an age when most men would be enjoying retirement, Professor Baird was feverishly working to further education. Professor Baird knew what it meant to serve God by serving his children. He always had a smile to share with everyone he met, and that smile brightened my day and lightened my

I felt a particular bond with as I am one of only a handful of elementary education majors. Baird would take me aside and do and how my family was uninely concerned for my well-heeded every word of wisdom imparted about the vital role the education of God's children as a leader to look to and follow.

I know Professor Baird left a hundreds, perhaps thousands, of service he provided will live on as lives he touched.

Dining Mini

Jon Cosby
Flower Mound, Tex.

The first year in college is every college student. I am now. I found the transition from a university to be difficult in therefore, BYU should make the comfortable as possible for freshmen.

Some questions incoming are, "How will I get food?" and get the basic necessities?" Fresh Dining Plus meal plan receive and anything not spent that day the next day. Because the money it is logical to allow students necessities at on-campus stores Dining Plus. The problem is campus stores accept Dining other stores work on the principle.

Freshmen can see that the plies many of the necessities are disappointed and baffled that the Bookstore does not Plus. BYU may not want Fresh Dining Plus to buy non-necessaries or games, but they should make purchasable with Dining Plus. ing their money, freshmen could over money from their Dining Bookstore.

Scarcity is a basic economic can be solved by implementing ket system in on-campus stores tem will make it so freshmen shortage of necessities, nor wait for them. Adam Smith, nomics, introduced the basic e ples of free trade more than BYU should probably be caught

I would just like to show my BYU basketball team. They exciting wins this past week 15 New Mexico Lobos (in T and another exciting win in tr UTEP. Anyone who saw the New Mexico knows the game close.

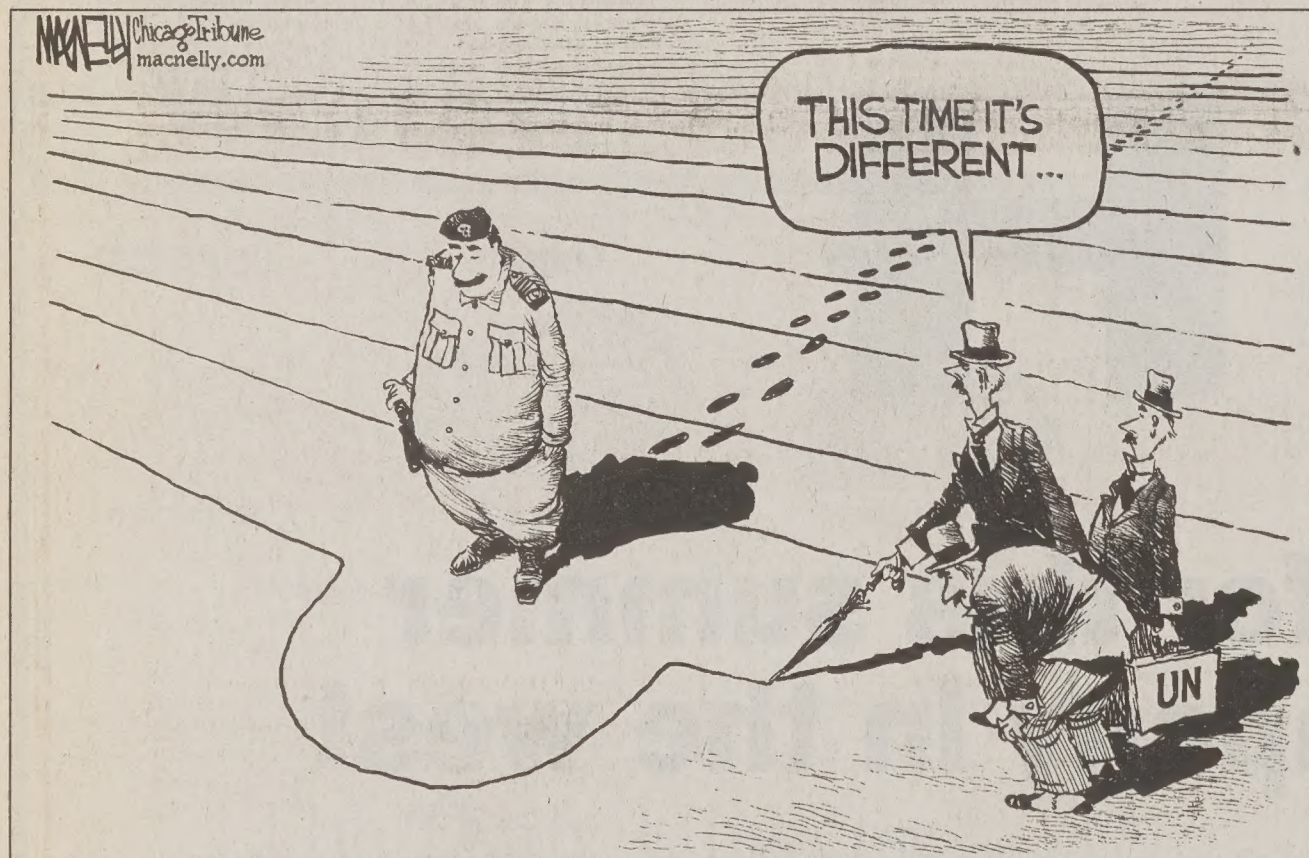

The program has come a long course of one year, and I'm what more Coach Cleveland given the opportunity to continue recruit the team and players that play.

I feel the program is in good we are back on the right track these two road wins give our evidence to make some noise in the ment in Las Vegas this week for next year. Great job Cougars

Viewpoint

Stand up to developers

On Feb. 17, the Provo City Council met to decide the destiny, and parenthetically the density, of the city. Ostensibly the issue was whether the city would change the zoning of a public golf course and its adjacent land from public-facility land to high-density zoning. High-density zoning would allow the golf course land to be turned into condos. I attended this lengthy and acrimonious meeting and made brief comments, as did several BYU students.

Too many members of the City Council seemed to see the issue as how many 20-plexes, twin homes and other types of condos the developer in question would be allowed to build. What I saw as the true issue of the meeting, which began at 7 p.m. and went almost to midnight (and yet only allowed the public to make comments limited to three minutes each, while allowing the developer lengthy presentations and rebuttals, but no rebuttal from the public or from neighborhood chairs) was whether or not Provo has leaders who will ask and answer the right questions and make the type of decisions this state and its early framers were famous for — decisions based on principle and a vision of what a city or state may become. I fear that instead what we may have are leaders who allow themselves to be bullied into positional bargaining with developers, leaders who try to make the best of bad situations rather than stand up under pressure from financially interested parties to frame development issues in our city by asking what is the best and highest use of a piece of land.

The Seven Peaks Golf Course and its surrounding public-facility zoned land are some of the most beautiful pieces of green space left in Provo, and they are adjacent to the mountain. As those of us with a bit of an institutional memory recall, that land and its public designation were protected so Provo would have a ski resort to enrich the city and provide an enduring public resource for recreation and economic strength. Those developers could not make their dream of a ski resort come true, so now we have a water park. What that water park will look like in 20 years is anyone's guess, but I suggest it will probably become condos given our current lack of planning.

Now the question, as the council members seem to see it, is whether, or how, to modestly scale back the developers' plans for high-density condos on this beautiful land. I ask them to see the true question: Why should we remove the public-facility zoning designation from this property at all? Why shouldn't we learn from other cities before it is too late, and preserve this beautiful green space as some sort of publicly beneficial land?

When the Winter Olympics comes to Seven Peaks and its ice rink, and the world's attention is focused on Provo and the Seven Peaks area, will the world see beautiful green space and mountains and a city of vision and hope or will they see more of the same old glut of condos and traffic problems caused by lack of planning and leaders who are too easily captured or intimidated by developers? We only have a brief window of opportunity in which to make decisions.

I urge residents and students to encourage our city planners to make crucial land-use decisions not out of fear, not in ad hoc positional bargaining about each developer's plans as they are presented, but based on a collective plan developed by residents and leaders that creates an enduringly beautiful and equitable city based on vision and principle and a long-range perspective. We must not abdicate our responsibility as citizens to developers. Let's not turn Seven Peaks into condos.

to host Dancesport Championships

RENEE MADSEN
Staff Writer

For the 16th consecutive year, the United States Ballroom Dance Championships, the most prestigious ballroom dance competition in the world, will be held at the Marriott Center on Thursday night. The competition, which will continue all day Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, will feature local performers in different categories, ranging in age and skill. The United States National Standard Championship, States Pre-teen, Junior, and Amateur Championships, as well as tango, foxtrot, waltz, and quickstep for adults. Some winners will compete in the world championships. Students from BYU's Ballroom Dance team will be competing in the event.

Internationally renowned, the BYU Ballroom Dance team has held the United National Formation Dance Championship title for the past 16 years.

Claudia Hill, BYU Dance faculty member, encourages BYU students to attend the championships, which she said have a reputation for being fun, lively and impressive.

"This is an opportunity to see some of the finest ballroom dancers in the nation ... (it's also) a chance to come and support classmates and see friends competing," Hill said.

Mountain View, Timpanogos, Orem High, Provo High, Timpani, American Fork, Pleasant Grove and Alta have students competing.

"We have the largest number of youth competitors anywhere in the United States, making Provo a great place for the competition," said Hill.

Dancers spend hundreds of hours practicing for the competition, which results in performances both technically skilled and aesthetically beautiful, Hill said.

Elaborate costumes add to the beauty of the performance. The average cost of a gown for this competition is $2,000, according to an estimate by Linda Wakefield, costume designer for BYU's Ballroom Dance Company.

More than 10,000 people attended last year's championships, and BYU's dance faculty expect attendance to be higher this year.

Television's Nostalgia channel will be broadcasting the championships.

Students wishing to attend the performance live may purchase one-day passes for $8 to $50 depending on seating, at the Marriott Center Ticket Office or by calling 378-BYU1. Each ticket allows admission to all the events for one day.

anthropologist who through a lecture on a New Guinean tribe to 10,000 grant he already men (Lily Tomlin), a colleague, calls his finding non-existent support of his three reluctantly partnering with an amateur anthropologist, Krippendorf attempts to pull off the greatest scientific hoax of the century.

KEVIN: I thought that the simple plot was promising, but quickly degenerated — as did the hoax itself.

HEATHER: The plot is not well defined. The transitions and motivations are unclear. There are so many unanswered questions, like why does Ruth Allen set out to disprove and destroy Krippendorf's credibility? The screenwriter seemed to be inserting conflict without much thought of where it came from.

KEVIN: I agree. The character motivation is a little vague. The role of the domineering grandparents is not quite clear either. However, the development of the children's character does add to the storyline, as the loss of a loved one is dealt with differently by each one.

HEATHER: There are some entertaining moments but most of the "comical" aspects are centered around sexual innuendoes and bathroom humor. It didn't make me laugh.

KEVIN: I think that for a film aimed at a family audience, "Krippendorf's Tribe" contains too much adult humor. It will not be on my must-see list for '98.

HEATHER: At least when I saw "Spice World," I knew what I was getting into, but this film was a disappointment.

We both agree that "Krippendorf's Tribe" should have remained lost.

A Worship Service of Hymns

"Three months after the Church was organized, the Lord, through the Prophet Joseph Smith, instructed Joseph's wife, Emma, to make a selection of sacred hymns for the Church: 'For my soul delighteth in the song of the heart; yea, the song of the righteous is a prayer unto me, and it shall be answered with a blessing upon their heads.'" (D&C 25:12)

So begins the First Presidency's introduction to our present Latter-day Saint hymnbook. That book, and the sacred tradition it reflects, has inspired the work of faculty and students at Brigham Young University. Several hymns in it were written by members of the BYU School of Music, such as We Will Sing a Song of Zion; When Faith Endures; Lord,

I Would Follow Thee; Thy Will, O Lord, Be Done; and I Know My Father Lives.

Other hymns have been arranged by faculty and students of the School for use on special occasions, such as in General Conference and at dedicatory services. Indeed, the basis for teaching and learning music at BYU is to prepare members of the Church to offer songs of the heart and receive the blessings promised to those who do so in righteousness.

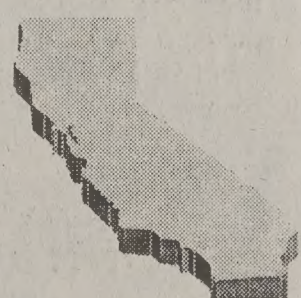

"Some of the greatest sermons are preached by the singing of hymns," the First Presidency goes on to explain. This devotional is a worship service of hymns written or arranged by members of the BYU School of Music and performed by its students and faculty.

Tulsa up first for hot Cougars

By ADAM WHITTEN
Universe Sports Writer

With its preseason goal achieved, the BYU men's basketball team enters the Western Athletic Conference tournament on cloud nine.

After being thrown to the vultures for dead during a nine-game losing streak the last half of the season, the Cougars won three of their last four games and proved they had a pulse.

Suddenly, BYU finds itself in good position not only to participate in the WAC tournament, but also to be a spoiler and win some games.

The Cougars, 9-20 overall and 4-10 in the WAC, play Tulsa, 18-11, 9-5 in the WAC, today in the first round. Tip-off is at 1 p.m. MST. The winner of the game plays New Mexico Wednesday.

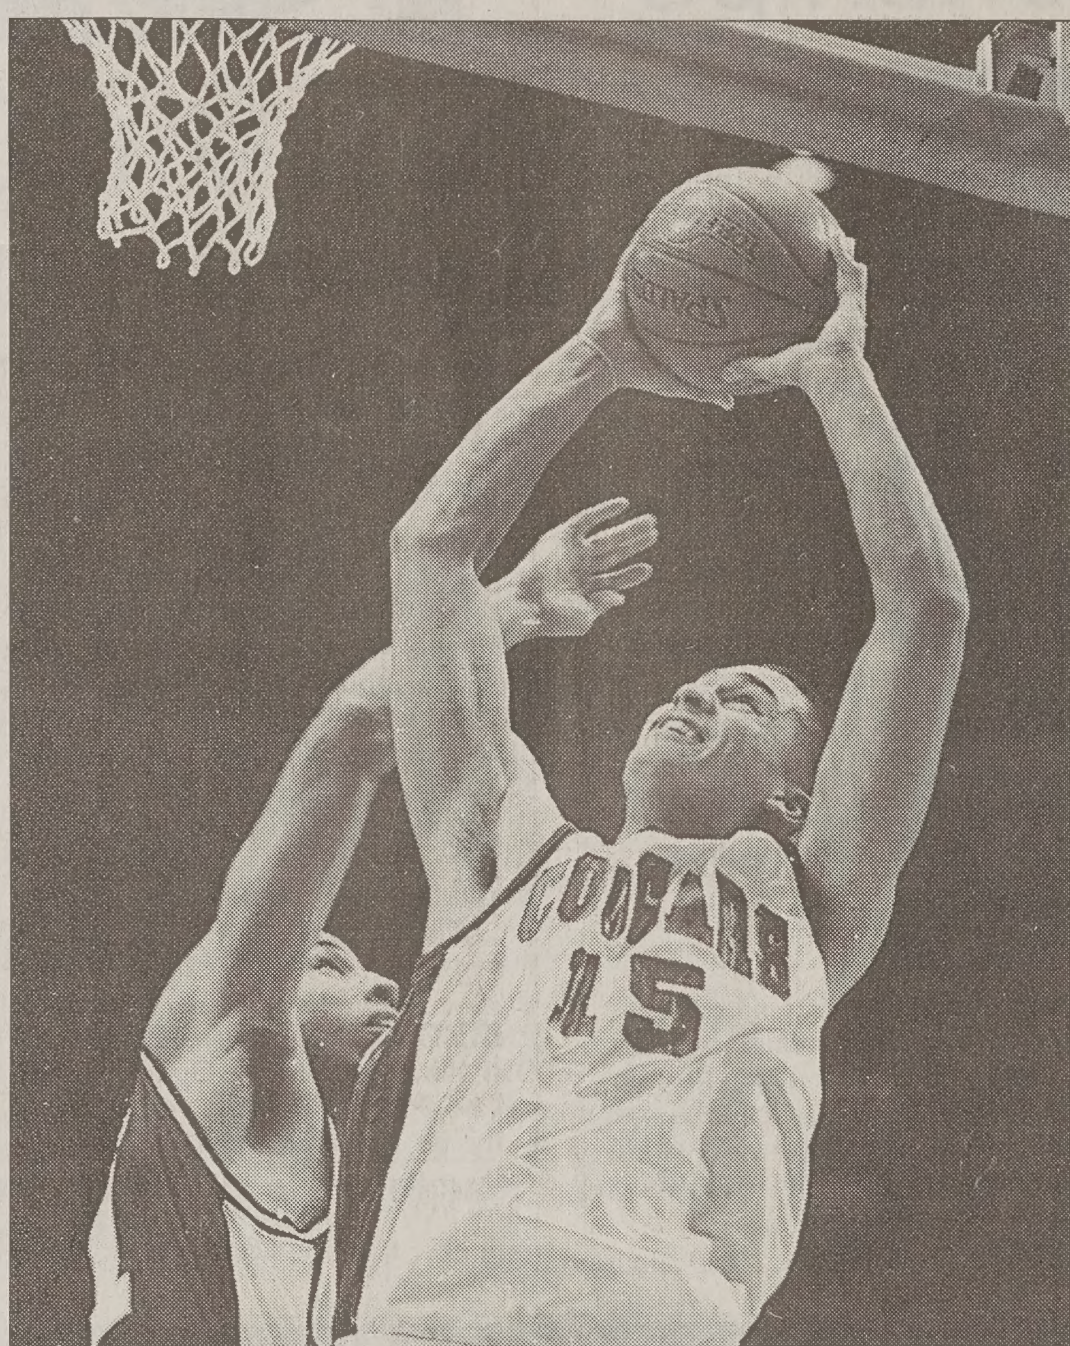

In their Jan. 5 meeting, BYU got 22 points and nine rebounds from Ron Selleaze in a 57-53 win. In the return meeting at the Marriott Center, Tulsa's Rod Thompson scored 16 and Michael Ruffin grabbed 12 rebounds in the Golden Hurricane's 65-59 win. That game had ugly written all over it, as both teams shot less than 40 percent from the field.

"I hate to use cliches, but we have to take these games one day at a time," BYU head basketball coach Steve Cleveland said. "If we play well against Tulsa, we can win. If we don't, we'll lose. It's that simple."

Cleveland said he felt the pressure to get to the tournament during the team's losing streak. Now, after posting four wins in the WAC and nine overall, Cleveland said this has to be considered a successful year.

He said with so much turnover in the coaches and players from last season's team, he is very pleased with how this season turned out.

Junior guard Brian Dignan said the team was excited with its win Saturday because the team realized its goal. He said it is now time to establish a new goal for the tournament.

Michael Brandy/Daily Universe

BYU's Mekeli Wesley goes up for a shot during the Cougars' 65-59 loss to Tulsa Feb. 7 at the Marriott Center. BYU will face Tulsa in the first round of the WAC Tournament today in Las Vegas.

"When you do (reach your goals), it makes everything you've done worthwhile," Dignan said. "But now that we're here, we might as well go do something in the tournament."

"We can win. If we play our game, we have a good chance."

Cleveland said he is concerned with the energy level of his team after such an emotionally and physically draining week. He noted the team was forced by last week's snow to take a bus to Las Vegas in order to fly to Albuquerque, N.M., for its game with the Lobos. Little did the team know the detour would foreshadow this week's trip.

Then, two nights later, the team played a 55-minute game that had more emotional twists and turns than a walk through the Wilkinson Center.

"The experience we'll gain by playing in the WAC tournament is a good thing," Cleveland said. "It implants in our players minds what it takes to get there. Hopefully, we can get there every year from now on and maybe even get a bye (in the first round)."

Women hang on to down Bulldogs

By CHELSEA LEINENBACH
Universe Sports Writer

Despite having never faced Fresno State in a tournament previously, the women's basketball team was not taken at all by surprise. The Cougars opened the Western Athletic Conference tournament Monday night by outscoring the Bulldogs 71-67.

"Our motto for the tournament is to value each possession," said head coach Trent Shippen. "We struggled with that a few times this game, because we were trying so hard we were a little tight. I hope we can relax for Utah."

The Cougars started the game with a six-point run. Senior forward, Barbie Carmichael, scored 15 of the Cougars' 21 points in the first eight minutes.

"I made my first two (three-pointers) and that calmed me down," Carmichael said. "I wasn't afraid to keep shooting it."

Carmichael said she wanted to win the game so her sister could see her play Wednesday. Her sister returned from a mission this week and will be in town for Wednesday's game against the University of Utah.

Though the Cougars started the game aggressively, Fresno didn't give them much to run with. Both teams struggled early, with BYU maintaining the slim lead.

With only 1:38 left in the half, the Cougars lost their lead for the first time.

But Kari Gallup's three-pointer and Jill Adam's free-throws gave the Cougars back the lead with only seconds remaining.

"When we got down all we could think about was winning this game," Gallup said.

Gallup was 3-4 from the three-point line in the first half, with Carmichael just ahead of her at 4-5 from behind the arc. BYU made 10 three-pointers, its second highest total of the season. "Those were big down the stretch," Shippen said.

Both Carmichael and Gallup scored in the double digits in the first half, Carmichael with 18 and Gallup with 13. Carmichael finished with a career high of 27 points, while Gallup chipped in 23.

The second half started off slower for the Cougars, with Fresno scoring the first six points. The Cougars didn't make a basket for the first four minutes of the second half.

BYU struggled to regain composure, but allowed an eight-point run three minutes into the half.

With four minutes left, the Cougars redeemed themselves, tying the game at 60. From that point on, the Cougars dominated the court, hitting seven shots in two minutes.

With time running out, Fresno was forced to foul. But the Bulldogs came up short, 71-67.

The Cougars go on to play No. 1 Mountain Division seed, Utah, in Thursday's WAC quarterfinals at 9:30 p.m. MST.

Various candidates up for Baseball Hall

Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Long ago, Larry Doby earned his place in baseball history as the first black player in the American League.

Today, all he's accomplished since might earn him a plaque in the Hall of Fame.

Doby, a hard-hitting outfielder who became a manager and an executive, will be a leading candidate when the Hall's Veterans Committee meets to vote on new members.

"Few have done more for the game," said AL president Gene Budig, who appointed Doby his special assistant shortly after taking office. "He has contributed so much, both on and off the field."

Dick Williams, who managed the Oakland Athletics to two World Series championships, and longtime Pittsburgh second baseman Bill Mazeroski also are expected to get consideration. So are former AL president Lee MacPhail and former commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

The 14-member veterans panel, which includes Ted Williams, Stan Musial and Yogi Berra, can elect up to four people.

The committee can pick one each from four categories — former major leaguers, Negro Leaguers, 19th century players and a composite category of managers, Negro Leaguers, executives and umpires.

It will take 75 percent for election. Last year, the committee selected Tom Lasorda, Nellie Fox and Willie Wells for induction.

In January, the Baseball Writers Association of America elected pitcher Don Sutton. Induction ceremonies will be this summer.

Doby played four seasons in the Negro Leagues before joining the Cleveland Indians in 1947, only weeks after Jackie Robinson broke baseball's color barrier.

Doby was in the majors until 1959, hitting 253 home runs with 969 RBIs while batting .283. He won two AL homer titles.

Kwan nets first post-Olympic endorsement

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Olympic silver medalist Michelle Kwan signed an endorsement deal Monday with Unilever Home and Personal Care to represent Deodorant Caress soap.

Kwan, 17, a two-time U.S. figure skating champion and 1996 world champ, finished second to Tara Lipinski at the Nagano Games. But she beat Lipinski to the first major endorsement contract.

"We are thrilled to have Michelle on our team," said Unilever Group brand manager Bob Avena. "Her extraordinary ability to perform flawlessly and gracefully under pressure make her the ideal role model for America's women and the ideal spokesperson for the fresh Deodorant Caress brand."

The silver medal was worth about $10 million in endorsement contracts for Nancy Kerrigan in 1994. Kwan, who is expected to remain Olympic-eligible until the 2002 Games in Salt Lake City, should collect at least that amount.

Gymnasts were three of the winners in the all-around event and won three of the five individual events.

Captain Angela Andersen scored on the uneven bars with a 9.875 and 9.9 on the vault and won the all-around with a 39.3 and was the cougar of the meet along with Natalie Emig.

Emig finished second in the all-around, tied her best score of the season on the floor. Freshman Kelly Emig, who tied her season best on the vault with a 9.85, was the top scorer on that event and finished third in the all-around.

Andersen said the team's low energy may have been affected by scheduling.

Cattermole agreed the two meets close together may have affected the team but said it shouldn't have.

"At this level of competition, if you can't do well in meets close together you won't go very far," he said.

Utah State head coach Ray Corn called his team's performance a disappointment.

USU junior Krissy Richards said there were some great individual performances but the team struggled.

"BYU is just a really good team and they hit their routines tonight," Richards said.

Emig said the full week before the team's next meet should provide the mental rest and hard practices necessary for the team to be ready. The Cougars will travel to Nebraska March 9 to take on the 19th-ranked Cornhuskers.

baseball team finished the Rawlings Spring tournament with three straight wins in Grand Junction, last weekend.

The Cougars beat Mesa State College 13-8 Friday and a double-header Saturday, in which they won 6-0 and spanked the University of Northern Iowa 6-0.

"We played beautiful baseball, but we sure didn't have a lot of heart," said BYU head coach Gary Patterson.

It was a tough loss for BYU in the final three games of the tournament where it had gone 1-2 in its first three games.

The Cougars' losses were an astounding 20-4 to the University of Nevada—Reno, which took first place in the tournament. Nevada—Reno went 3-1 with wins over the University of Utah and a loss to Texas Tech.

Utah Tech 4-1 in its first game of the tournament. In the game against MSC, junior left-fielder Brent Patterson cleared a double in the 10th inning and led off to lift BYU to its 13-8 victory.

One of the other key players, including freshman pitcher, who pitched six innings of shutout ball, was pitcher, who did well in the relief position.

Junior third-baseman David Decker made a catch that saved two runs in the bottom of the sixth, and sophomore 1B/P Walt Waldrup went 4-5 with a double.

In the first game of BYU's double-header Saturday, the Cougars had five doubles. Sophomore outfielder Spencer Oborn chipped in with a double and a triple against MSC.

Oborn continued hitting well in Game 2 with another double and the first of his two home runs against UNC in the fourth inning.

"Oborn, like some of our other players, has taken a little while to get underway," Pullins said.

Junior Jeremy Thomas struck out seven UNC batters in five innings, and freshman lefty Tom Doxey struck out five in three innings of relief.

Pullins said he is happy with the Cougars' performance thus far, but would like to see more consistency in BYU's game, especially in hitting.

"We are playing sporadically. I'd like to see a better brand of baseball," Pullins said.

That may be what BYU needs as it faces Rice University this weekend in Houston. Rice won the WAC title and went all the way to the College World Series last year.

"They are a beatable team," Pullins said. "We are getting better defensively every day, and with some outdoor practice this week our hitting will improve."

Until now, the Cougars have been forced to practice in the Smith Fieldhouse annex due to cold weather. The Cougars have a record of 10-4 this season.

Rugby team comes home after splitting road matches

By STEVE SHAW
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU rugby team showed they can play with the national powers this past weekend.

After a lackluster effort in their win against Utah State last Saturday, the Cougars knew they'd have to work hard to compete against these top teams.

BYU faced No. 2 Stanford on Thursday and played a hard fought match, but came out on the short end 28-27. On Saturday, the Cougars rebounded to tie the No. 3 ranked team UC-Davis 13-13.

In the first match, Stanford started the scoring early by scoring a try and converting a penalty kick to take an early lead. BYU answered with 10 points of their own to cut the halftime lead to 11-10.

The Cougars came out with a vengeance in the second half scoring two tries in the first 15 minutes, and added a penalty kick to lead 27-11. However, Stanford came back to score two tries of their own to cut the lead to 27-25.

In the final two minutes of the game, BYU faced a bunch of penalties and Stanford capitalized by kicking one of two penalty kicks to give the Cardinals the win 28-27.

"We dug ourselves in a hole unnecessarily in the first half," said team captain Romaine Marshall. "We had opportunities to get more points, but we didn't capitalize."

Senior James Nadauld suffered a shoulder injury in the game and is questionable for the team's next game.

"If we had played on a neutral field we would've beat them," said junior David Wheeler. "When (Nadauld) went out we lost a lot of momentum."

The Cougars looked to rebound against UC-Davis. El Nino left the field muddy and sloppy making it difficult for the Cougars to play a passing game.

Davis scored first with a try and a penalty kick, but BYU converted a penalty kick of their own to go into the half trailing 10-3.

In the second half, BYU scored on another penalty kick and added a try and a conversion to take a 13-10 lead. However, Davis countered with a penalty kick to tie the match at 13. Neither team could score in the final moments and the match ended in a draw.

"The field was terrible. It was a mud-bath and we couldn't pass as much as we wanted," Marshall said.

Even though the Cougars couldn't pull out a victory, they felt the road trip was a moral victory for the team.

"Morally we feel we walked away with a win. Physically we beat them. Unfortunately we couldn't win on the scoreboard," Wheeler said.

"We played two of our best games of the season. Everyone played well. They showed good mobility and guys got to the ball quickly," Marshall said.

The Cougars now prepare for Saturday's home match against Weber State. The match will be played at Helaman Halls Field at 1 p.m.

Student housing modified in Orem

By JENNIFER TRENDLER
Universe Staff Writer

The Orem City Council amended development standards and re-zoned property for student housing Feb. 24.

Most of the debate centered around the development standards for student housing. One change allows for a maximum 10 percent non-student occupancy instead of a mandatory 100 percent student occupancy. One of the reasons for this change is to accommodate handicapped people who are not students.

"I feel strongly about providing housing for handicapped people," said Mike Anderson, owner of Greenbriar Apartments, 650 S. 1200 West. If the standards had not been amended, Anderson would have had to evict some of his non-student tenants.

Another change concerned the wording in the development standards, which stated the housing was limited to students working toward a bachelor's degree.

"I would like you to use another term other than (bachelor's)," Anderson said.

This request was made in order to allow students attending school somewhere other than a four-year university to stay in student housing.

The councilmembers agreed the wording should be changed to include students seeking a "post high-school degree."

The re-zoning for student housing was a point of disagreement for councilmember Mike Thompson.

"I have a problem myself with a zone just for students," Thompson said. "Why do we need a special zone just for students?"

Contrary to Thompson, Councilmember Judy Bell said she really felt that there needed to be student housing.

"It needs to be for students," she said. "The college isn't going to go away. The purpose is to have a place close to campus where the students can stay."

Currently, there are about 500 student housing units available in Orem, according to Orem Development Services. They don't know exactly how many more units will be available on the re-zoned property because no one has come to them with a site plan. Rezoning is only the first step to providing student housing.

The housing will be between I-15 and I-200 West and also from 400 South southward to 534 S. 1200 West.

BYU was asked whether the housing is going to be BYU approved.

"(Orem city officials) would have to approach us and then we would have to look at it," said Steve Nielsen, BYU housing official. "No one has approached us yet."

Val Peterson, associate vice president for college relations at Utah

Valley State College, said he is not aware of any housing problems for UVSC students. However, he is pleased with the prospect of new student housing.

"Certainly, any housing close to campus is advantageous to our students," Peterson said. "We welcome student housing."

Summer break debated

By AUTUMN FOSTER
Universe Staff Writer

Parents and teachers at Westridge Elementary School in Provo are divided over whether to have a six- or eight-week summer break for the one-track year-round schedule.

Though some parents are pleased with the school board's choice to schedule a six-week break, others feel the board did not consider parents' feelings in deciding the matter.

"There was an air of intimidation," said Judy Rawlins, a parent who attended the meeting. "The administration made great efforts to make sure all the faculty were (at the meeting)." However, she said she felt they didn't make enough of an effort to get all the parents there.

Westridge's Board of Directors co-Chair Lisa Harkness, one of six parents on the board, said they tried to involve parents in the scheduling decisions.

"I really think the board did everything possible to let everyone be heard," said Harkness. "Everybody got a little bit."

The board had three cottage meetings at the school at the end of January to listen to parents' feelings and concerns about the new one-track year-round schedule.

The school has been operating on a four-track year-round schedule, but a survey conducted by the school board found that most parents preferred to drop the four-track system for one of three other options.

The board used the data gathered by the survey to decide upon two alternatives. Parents will be able to choose whether they send their children to school 180 or 200 days of the year.

Both groups will get out of school at the same time in June, but those on the 200-day schedule, or E-track, will only have two-week breaks in the spring and fall, while the other group will have three weeks, Harkness said.

Most parents preferred the extended-year schedule, Israelsen said. The one-track year-round and traditional models both received support from about one-third of the parents.

Once the kind of schedule was decided upon, she said, the board met together to "talk amongst itself" about what kind of break to schedule in the summer.

Israelsen said the teachers were in favor of a five week break while most parents supported scheduling seven weeks or eight weeks for the break. The board compromised at six weeks.

The new schedule will start in August.

Y prof joins child protection panel

By NATALEE CAPPS
Universe Staff Writer

Cheryl B. Preston, a law professor at BYU, was appointed Monday to a three-member panel responsible for documenting the state's improvement in the child protection system.

The panel was instituted through a settlement with the National Center for Youth Law of San Francisco. The NCYL represented child plaintiffs in Utah's system in a lawsuit in 1983. The NCYL argued Child Protection Services was not adequate in its care for abused children and that accurate records were not being kept.

Gov. Mike Leavitt announced Preston's appointment. She replaces Larry Lunt, who left the panel earlier this year because of time constraints, according to The Associate Press.

Preston said she feels she can bring an objective outlook to the panel.

"I am a good problem solver and negotiator," Preston said. "I feel that I will be good at looking reasonably and fairly at the data presented."

The panel has been controversial in the past. Questions regarding the progress of the state, the method of data collection and the adequacy of the review panel have been raised by concerned parties.

Randy Ripplinger, public information officer for the Department of Human Services, felt the recent changes in appointments to the monitoring panel would solve any problems faced in the past.

"What we have sought for all along is a collaborative relationship between us and the monitoring panel and the NCYL," Ripplinger said. "The monitoring panel serves a very vital function, and we feel very good about the new appointees."

Preston said she is confident that with the new changes to the panel there will be significant progress toward resolving the issues involved in the lawsuit.

"We have an outside auditor compiling all the data, and we have high expectations for the work he will accomplish," she said. "The state has also worked hard to help us with our efforts."

The settlement requires the panel to work through August of 1998, when a federal judge will review the settlement to determine if the state has adequately complied. If parties cannot agree or compromise at that time, litigation might be reinstated in a federal court, Preston said.

Preston has been a law professor at BYU since 1989. She teaches classes in contracts, bankruptcy and banking law and does research in gender and family issues.

Preston is the state's appointee to the panel. The other members include Pam Rasmussen, appointed by the NCYL, and Pamela Atkinson, who was appointed by both the state and the NCYL.

Zoning issues, ads focus for Council

By AMY FOX
Universe Staff Writer

The Provo City Council will be addressing several controversial issues at their meeting tonight.

Re-zoning the Seven Peaks golf course to allow for a new housing development will be discussed. The last meeting on this issue lasted until 1:30 a.m., and 33 residents gave their input on the matter.

The council voted Feb. 17 to allow two weeks to work out the development agreement with Seven Peaks.

If it is completed by tonight, the city will then consider the zoning issue at hand. The council will not be allowing any more public input on the issue.

After the elections last November, an ordinance was proposed that would prohibit committees such as Ethics 4 Provo to publish anonymous, inaccurate advertisements, said councilmember David Rail.

"I think everyone has a right to say something about a candidate, but to hide behind the anonymity to influence an election is what I have a problem with," said council chair Greg Hudnall.

The ads placed by Ethics 4 Provo attacked mayoral candidate Lewis Billings and City Council candidate

Greg Hudnall. The last time the council discussed the proposed ordinance Hudnall spoke out about the need to change the city's laws on campaign financial disclosure.

"I want to go on record ... this needs to happen. We need to have the decency, courtesy and the professionalism to move forward on this," Hudnall said.

There are many constitutional issues involved in the proposed ordinance. Neil Lindberg, the City Council attorney who constructed the proposed ordinance, cited several court cases used as precedent for the new ordinance.

"Is the ordinance constitutional? I don't know. I think it is defensible though," Lindberg said.

The other hot agenda item is the down-zoning of the Joaquin neighborhood. This neighborhood takes in the area between 400 East and 1080 East and Center Street to 560 North. The zoning change, if approved, would prohibit two family residential living, or student living in the area. No student would be out of a home if the appropriate zoning has already been approved by the city.

"If they are legal now, they will be legal then (after a zoning change)," said Ted Dowling, executive director for the City Council.

Restoration of meanders to bring life to Provo River

By KATHRYN PETERSON
Universe Staff Writer

The plan to restore a series of meanders, or natural river windings, to the Provo River has sprung hope for a healthier, more diverse environment, said the chair of the Utah Reclamation Mitigation and Conservation Commission.

URMCC Chair Don Christiansen said where there is restoration, there is hope.

"The project will be a big boom for the environment," Christiansen said. "By putting back natural meanders into the stream, there will be an increase in the number of fish and wildlife in the area."

The number of trout produced in the stream is estimated to soar to more than 25,000 pounds a year — a 480 percent increase. Bird populations are expected to double, according to an Environmental Impact statement.

The project will increase wetland habitat by 207 acres. Wooded areas will increase by 238 acres, according to The Associated Press.

Under the plan, approved by the URMCC, the 10-mile stretch through Heber Valley will become two miles longer.

The recent vote to remedy the middle stretch of the Provo River from Jordanelle Dam to Deer Creek Reservoir culminates four years of study and debate between URMCC and landowners, who worry they will lose land that has been a part of their heritage and dreams, despite the fair-market value they will get for the property.

"People who own property have different ideas of what they want to do with it," Christiansen said. "With the population growth and development, they'll feel a lot of pressure. We've assured them a revenue value of the property."

Joe Casper, a fourth generation landowner from Heber City, said the plan has totally decimated his farm. He, along with 29 other landowners, will be affected by the plan.

Other landowners, although unhappy with the plan, have expressed their appreciation to URMCC. They say the five-member commission, appointed by President Clinton, has been very honest and fair in its dealings with the people.

Mike Weland, executive director of URMCC, said most landowners have made it clear that they don't want any more changes in the valley.

"However, changes are already occurring. We've tried to be good neighbors in dealing with them," Weland said.

The meanders that existed in the river were eliminated by channeling projects during the 1940s and '50s. Dikes were built to prevent flooding, but since then, the fish and wildlife habitat has declined substantially.

The Provo River project is estimated to cost $25 million and take six years to complete.

In addition to restoring the meanders, the Provo River project will construct backwaters and islands, remove dikes and acquire adjacent land to allow the stream to flow onto its historic flood plain, according to The Associated Press.
